

Why FLOORING COMES LAST

04.18.2026

In a well-executed remodel, flooring is never the starting point. It is the final layer that completes the design. Here is why flooring is approached last in remodeling.

1. Flooring Availability Changes

Flooring can be discontinued, and even when it remains available, dye lot variations between production batches make exact color matching nearly impossible for future repairs.

2. Prevents Design Limitations

Installing flooring first can limit your design options and restrict potential layout changes within your home.

3. Avoids Costly Damage

Construction exposes floors to heavy traffic and debris. By laying flooring last, you preserve its beauty and finish.

Flooring is the final detail that ensures every element is synchronized to create a refined, elegant, and intentional look. If you are planning a remodel, start with design-build.
